THURSTON RECEIVING ENTHUSIASTIC SUPPORT ALL OVER STATE

An index to the strength of the appeal which the candidacy of Paul G. Thurston of Bethel for Governor is making to the voters of Maine is found in hundreds of letters which he receives each week from enthusiastic supporters. These letters which come from all parts of the State are from members of both political parties, Republicans as well as those of his own Democratic party voicing approval.

Underlying nearly every one of these letters is the expressed conviction that Thurston's positive presentation of his views upon State issues in the original announcement of his candidacy and in his speeches since that time have made him a powerful contender for the gubernatorial nomination.

A Gorham Democrat writes: "I wish to congratulate you upon your stand taken upon the various issues of vital importance to the people of Maine, especially the Power Issue, and you are correct when you say that it is still an issue. You are the only candidate in either party thus far to come out and say anything definite in regard to this or any other issue. I assure you that you will have my active support."

Other excerpts from the letters taken at random follow: From Phillips: "Your statement in connection with the announcement of your candidacy for Governor is just what I have been hoping for. It says what should be done in a form anyone can understand and if I am not mistaken will make a great appeal to the average voter."

From Norridgewock: "I have talked with some very radical Republicans and also let them read about the stand you take in the management of our State government. Such items as taxation, highways, and above all that the man himself is a business man instead of being a lawyer appeals very strongly to their way of thinking in these terrible times."

From St. Albans: "I like the stand you take on business affairs."

From South Portland: "Strength to your arms and success to your banner."

From Gray: "You are making a fine impression in this vicinity."

From Mechanic Falls: "I am very much pleased with the text of Paul G. Thurston of Bethel. He echoes my ideas to a letter and I can support him with a good will."

From Guilford: "Think the Democrats of Maine will do well to get behind Thurston this fall and elect him to office."

From Fort Fairfield: "Mr. Thurston seems to combine the qualifications which the Democratic party needs in its candidate and which the State needs at August. I propose to give him my support for whatever it is worth."

From Wayne: "I am glad to know that there is somebody that has got some sympathy for the poor class in the State of Maine."

From Rumford: "I read your announcement and statement to the Times with interest and approval and I wish you well—so much as any dyed-in-the-wool Republican can."

Answering this "fain mail," and none of the writers is neglected—is an important activity at Thurston headquarters.

GIRL RESERVES INSTALLATION AND FAREWELL MEETING

On Wednesday evening, June 1st, the Academy Girl Reserves held two very impressive ceremonies on the lawn of the Students' Home, which were attended by several interested mothers and friends.

The first was the installation of the officers of the Y. W. C. A. cabinet, chosen for next year. The pledge call was sounded by Richard Young, after which the old and new cabinet members, led by Wilma Hall, advanced before the installing officer. The girls of the Association sang the "Hymn of the Lights," while the former officers carried lighted candles, and the new officers unlighted ones. After the charge had been given by the installing officer, each girl explained her duties to her successor and lighted her candle.

The Senior Farewell followed, with 18 members of the Senior class receiving candles, the colors being symbols of the number of years that each had been a member of the Girl Reserves. Eight girls received the Gold Candle of Service, representing four years connection with the club. The Seniors then marched from the lawn, the entire group of girls following them, singing the international song, "Follow the Glean."

CHURCH ACTIVITIES

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
L. A. Edwards, Pastor
1945 Morning Worship. The Pastor's theme will be "Upward and Onward." The most natural thing for a person to do when he is flat on his back is to look up; but some of us who had our backs in this position are deliberately closing our eyes.

It may be a good thing at times to look backward, but the Prophet is of more value to the world than the historian.

The Children's Day exercises that were to have been held this Sunday have been postponed, but the pastor will be glad to baptize any children who may be presented by the parents at the service.

The Church School and the Comrades of the Way have closed for the Vacation Period.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY

Services Sunday morning at 10:45. Subject of the lesson sermon, God the Preserver of Man.

A luncheon is that is not managed, but is crowded out by competition and eventually faces bankruptcy by a receivership. Modern luncheon will not tolerate waste and inefficiency. The same thing is true in the matter of government and the expenditure of tax money, with the exception that when the funds are exhausted the tax is raised and more money is added for. There is a limit even to this. New sources of tax money are discovered and brought into use, but eventually the limits of these will be reached. When the limit comes as heavy that business and the individual breaks down under it, adjustments will be forced upon us. Wise leadership, it would appear, should bring about the necessary reforms before this point is reached and radical adjustments become necessary.

The man who trusts men will make fewer mistakes than he who distrusts them.—Cavour.

E. W. Howe, veteran newspaper editor and writer, says that the trouble with the world today is not management of our public affairs, but that the people are responsible because the chief executives in leading positions are more than ready to say, "No one seems to realize," the writer continues, "that we may manage our public affairs reasonably well, and then allow them to ruin because of the selfishness of public affairs."

DAIRYING

FARM BUREAU NEWS

Four more dairymen have been added to the list of 26 who will be included in the Dairy Record Club to be started in the county the last of this month. The 26 men were given in the last issue. The four additional are: G. K. Hastings & Son, East Bethel; B. C. Smith, West Bethel; E. J. Stearns, Bethel; and Dana O. Dudley, Bryant Pond. Three hundred and eighty cows are now enrolled for this milk testing service. Consult your County Agent for information if interested.

Virgil N. Smith, an orchardist in Buckfield, has recently completed work on an attractive new house and stable which replaces buildings lost by fire. A new 250 gallon power sprayer operating two lines of hose and quad gun is doing a great spraying job on his commercial orchard, he states.

G. K. Hastings and his two sons "Bob" and "Bill" at East Bethel are real farmers. Keeping an Extension Farm Account for the last ten years as a guide to their farm operations they have gradually worked up to the top as successful farmers. This year they are planting 15 acres of Green Mountain potatoes, part of which they plan to enter for certification. They are also conducting a half-acre magnum test plot to determine the need for this element on their own farm. In addition to potatoes they are brooding 700 chicks from their own hatching. Pedigreeing which involves training, was started last fall to develop highest possible production in their flock. These boys are also dairymen, not slow to take advantage of the milk testing service offered by the Dairy Record Club and are planning on construction of a safety bull pen this summer or fall.

Buckfield heads the list on apple tree removal for fruit fly control. In connection with the campaign started in that community, 15 men agreed to remove 711 old trees this winter and spring. Ten of these men have already removed 657 trees and more are coming out. In South Paris, eleven orchardists have removed 493 trees.

VEGETABLE GARDENS
SUGGEST WAR DAYS

More backyards and city lots will be in gardens this year than at any time since the World War, believe Theresa E. Wood, foods specialist for the Extension Service, who says that a good vegetable garden may afford necessary food supply for the family that is hit by unemployment.

More than that, she goes on, the vegetables will not only improve the flavor and variety of the daily meals but also will furnish the minerals and vitamins necessary for a balanced diet. The menus possible with a garden give more convincing evidence of the advantages of growing some of the family food. With potatoes still in the family's food requirements, many families have found themselves without any vegetables during the latter part of the winter and in the spring before the wild greens and rhubarb came through the ground. The garden is a big help to both the budget and the health of the family.

4-H CLUB NOTES
Oxford County has added one more community to its 4-H Club organization. The boys and girls in Carleton are taking Gardening and Cooking and Housekeeping.

The officers are: President, Chester Wheeler; Vice-President, Russell Burris; Secretary, Donald Luxton; Treasurer, Alfred Lovejoy; Cheer Leader, Joe Waterman; Color Bearer, George Luxton; Song Leader, Warren Tyler.

They are also conducting a half-acre magnesium test plot to determine the need for this element on their own farm. In addition to potatoes they are brooding 700 chicks from their own hatchling. More than that, she goes on, the vegetables will not only improve the flavor and variety of the daily meals, but also will furnish the minerals and vitamins necessary for a balanced diet. The menus possible with a garden give more convincing evidence of the advantages of growing some of the family food. With potatoes still a dinner standby (nothing quite takes the place of potatoes), the garden can furnish fresh green peas, young lettuce and string beans and many other crisp vegetables instead of only the roots or stored foods that are depended upon in winter.

The dietary rule about vegetables is this: Serve three vegetables daily, one of which may be potatoes; a second should be a yellow or green colored vegetable, including leafy vegetables frequently. A raw fruit, raw vegetables or canned tomatoes should be included daily. It is very easy to follow if one plans ahead with a large vegetable garden, allowing plenty to can and store.

It is not too late to put in a vegetable garden and grow a portion of the family's food requirements. Many families have found themselves without any vegetables during the latter part of the winter and in the spring before the wild greens and rhubarb came through the ground. The garden is a big help to both the budget and the health of the family.

LET COWS MOW MORE GRASS, DAIRY EXPERT SUGGESTS

The old gray mare not only isn't what she used to be, but there are actually so few of her kind that the good hay market of bygone days is no more. Motor cars and tractors caused this, but what is the land being used for that once grew all of this hay? R. F. Talbot, dairy specialist for the Extension Service, says that records for Maine do not show an increased number of cattle and other live stock to feed this hay, and neither have sufficient other crops been added to make up the difference.

With this situation in mind, Mr. Talbot believes that many Maine farmers would benefit by using a part of their hay fields for pasture. He said:

"The majority of pastures, unless considerably overstocked, have abundant feed during the month of June and a part of July, but in August and September feed becomes short and of poor quality.

"One reason why pastures do not furnish better feed is because they are grazed continuously during the summer without the grasses having an opportunity to store up food material in the root system. Alternating grazing helps to correct this difficulty.

"Many dairymen plant forage crops, such as oats and peas, Japanese millet, and other green feeds, to supplement pastures during the summer and fall. This method of cropping will still continue on many farms, but there are many others which could well consider taking in a portion of the hay fields for pasture. Eliminating the labor of getting in forage crops and the money expended on these would go a long way toward improving the fertility of the fields converted into pasture.

"On many acres daisies and orange hockweed have replaced good hay; some farms have been abandoned; on others the type of agriculture has changed. It would seem evident from these facts that there must be an opportunity for converting better land into pasture, land that is suitable to plow, that can be mowed if necessary, is more easily fenced, and when desired may be used in the rotation with other crop land.

"The area selected will probably be determined by the type of soil, its fertility, presence of desirable pasture grasses, nearness to barn, convenience to turn cows into pastures, and the availability of water. The acreage included will be governed by the number of cows to be pastured, the carrying capacity of the area, and the opportunity for alternating pastures. It is possible by fencing separate areas, fertilizing them, and regulating grazing to have good feed throughout a season of normal rainfall.

"Test the soil for acidity. If it is medium to slightly acid, apply 1000 pounds of lime. If strongly acid, apply 2000 pounds. This should be adequate for about six years. The amount of fertilizer to use will vary with the condition of the field. From 500 to 800 pounds of a complete fertilizer, 4-8-4, or a 5-8-7, applied once in three years will fit average condition. The second and third years, 150 pounds of nitrate of soda, or its equivalent in the form of sulphate of ammonia, calcium nitrate, cyanamid, or other nitrate fertilizer will assist in hastening grass growth during the spring, as well as throughout the grazing period."

"CAN ALL YOU CAN" IS AGENT'S SLOGAN

Home Demonstration Agent Urges Intensive Canning Activity.

Shelves groaning under the burden of hundreds of quarts of home-canned vegetables, fruit, and meats are the most effective means of lifting the burden of providing three meals a day in the face of hard times. Convinced of the soundness of this advice, Mrs. Dora DeCoster, County Home Demonstration Agent, has adopted "Can All You Can" as her slogan and is urging farm women throughout the county to plan an abundance of garden stuff this season in order to have a good surplus for canning.

"Go at this canning business as if it were a matter of life and death," says Mrs. DeCoster. "In some instances, it actually is. In many others having plenty of canned foods on hand makes all the difference between an abundant table and a slimy one, between a well balanced and health-giving diet, and one that is alarmingly deficient.

a loud laugh. "Deevils! That's pretty good!" One pale blue eye closed under a bushy brow. "Since ye fished that good looking girl of LeBlond out the lake and sneaked over under her father's nose to spend the day with her, I figured there was a devil among the weemen up there. But evil spirits!"

Jim's cold eyes met the other's smile. So Aurora's Indian girl had talked? This was what Mary had heard.

"Paradis spread the tale through a medicine man that the place was haunted," Stuart explained, ignoring the insinuating grin of his chief. "But Esau convinced them that it was simply a trick to get the trade."

This was Jim's sole report of the Odyssey of the three friends to the Sturgeon valley and many a new moon was to swing above the white desert of Lake Esau before Aurora drew Christie heard the story. Until the night of the Pipestone and the Sturgeon country packed the fur-loft of Sunset House, the lips of three men were closed.

When the ice grew strong enough for sledding on the great lake, and the snow deepened in the forest, Jim and Omar would start back with the dogs; until then, they were held prisoners at the post. One winless day, a lead-lined sky blanketed the sun and the air slowly went white. The "long snows" had come.

By the early dusk six inches had fallen. Outside the trade-house two toboggan sleds, their loads covered with tarpaulin wrappers and lashed, waited for the early start, before dawn, under the stars.

At Christie's house Jim, the clerk, McComb, and the inspector sat at their supper. Following her custom, Mary had served the men and retired to the kitchen.

"Ye have plenty of fish on yer cache, Stuart?" demanded Christie. "Two extra teams'll make a hole in yer supply and I don't want my dogs underfed."

"We made a big haul of whitefish and lake trout this fall; there's plenty. I'll have your dogs back here in good shape before Christmas."

"What's all that noise about over at the trade-house?" broke in McComb.

The three men stopped eating to listen. "I hear dog bells," said Jim, rising. "Don't suppose they've sent a packer through from the railroad?"

"That's just what it is," agreed Christie, rising with a mouth full of food.

Leaving the house, the three men walked through the falling snow toward the yellow glow of the trade-house windows. In front of the building the post dogs curled and snarled around a panting team, whose driver held off Christie's hounds with a heavy whip while he talked to two company Indians.

"Maff packer," Jim smirked. "She'll get my letter, then, next week." While the driver led his fired dogs off to be fed, the mail pouch was brought into the kitchen and eagerly opened.

"I'm so sorry, Jim," she said, quietly, "that it has come to you as well as to me."

He glanced at the sheet he held in his hands, and there, laughing up at him, was the face of Aurora LeBlond. Under it he read: "Miss Aurora LeBlond, daughter of Louis LeBlond, of the North-West Trading Company, who is to marry Bruce MacLauren, well-known Winnipeg business man."

Jim let the paper slide to the floor. So it was MacLauren, all the time? MacLauren, the smooth city man, her father's financial backer. While the three from Sunset House went north to search for Jingwak, MacLauren had wasted no time with the girl who doubted the love of a man who could leave her.

Her eyes soft with compassion, Mary Christie watched the stricken face of Stuart.

After a space, he raised his eyes to hers. "Thank you, Mary," he said thickly. "We're getting an early start. I think I'll turn in."

Insenable to his surroundings, like one in a dream, he stood staring at the floor; then, with a deep breath, said: "Good-night! Good-by, Mary!" Like a blind man he groped his way from the room.

CHAPTER XII

Under the bitter stars, for the snow had ceased, the two dog-teams jingled out of the post clearing to the lake ice. As they left the shore and took the snow-covered trail up the purple plain of Lake Esau to the mouth of the Womna river, Jim glanced back at the huddle of dark buildings. From the second floor of the inspector's house a window shone yellow through the dusk. It was the room of Mary Christie.

"She's sorry, poor girl!" he thought. "She's going good-by—telling me she's sorry. Bless her big heart!"

He stopped and waved his hand, wondering if she could see him out there in the starlight; then, with his bitterness, turned and followed his trotting dogs.

A week later Jim, Esau and Mirwan, with three loaded sleds, left Sunset House bound for the Pipestone lakes, while Omar remained at the post to prepare for the Christmas trade. Night after night the hurt which tortured Jim's days waited him with the poignancy of the dreams it brought. And, after supper, as he conjured up the face of Aurora in the fire which held his brooding eyes, often, from old habit, his hand instinctively groped for the furry ruff, the pointed ears on the massive skull of Smoke lying beside him, to meet no touch of a moist nose, no lick of a warm tongue. He had lost them both—the two creatures he loved.

At the Lake of the Great Stones old Jingwak, who had acted as his agent, waited at a large camp of hunters for Jim's sleds loaded with trade goods. In two days Stuart and Esau turned south with more black and silver fox, lynx and marten than had reached Sunset House the previous year. And, according to Jingwak, the bulk of the Christmas trade was yet to come.

"Christie's eyes'll stick out of his head when he sees the fur we send to Expense after Christmas," Jim said triumphantly, to Esau. "We've got more than double the value of last year's trade on the sleds right now." He patted the old man's shoulder affectionately. "And you are responsible for it."

Esau's scamed face beamed in his pleasure. "Your father, he feel happy, now, to know that Sunset House get de fur ah-hah!"

The man who carried a wound no material success could heal smiled at the quaint fancy of the loyal old Ojibwa. "Yes, father will be happy now. He knew he left Jim in good hands."

Through the dusk of one starless night, three trail weary teams of huskies left the lake ice and turned into the clearing where the candlelit windows of Sunset House beckoned. Warned by the yelping of the dogs, Omar threw open the trade house door and hurried to the sleds with welcoming "ho-ho's."

"You get de fur?" demanded Omar, peering at the sled wrappings. "Heaps of it, Omar!" cried Jim. "Jingwak and old Zolake are bringing the whole hunt of the country with them! Christmas! We've got LeBlond's sled to a stamper!"

When the sleds were unloaded at the trade-house door and the dogs fed, the hungry and tired factor of Sunset House sought his supper. In his kitchen he found Sarah busy over a pan of steaming moose steaks.

"Ho-ho, ho-ho, Meester Jeem!" cried the red-faced cook, brandishing a fork in one hand as she welcomed Stuart with the other. "You hear all right? You make de best trade, ah-hah! I had you tell Omar. But you bring back de face so thin, Sarah, she feed you up." Then, with a questioning look of her snapping black eyes, she asked as she nodded toward the living room: "You see nothing even dere?"

"So, what d'ye mean?" Sarah's flat face divided in a wide grin. "You look!"

Curious, Jim walked into the living room. There on the table lay one of his own envelopes. Casually he picked it up. On the envelope he read his own name in the handwriting of Aurora LeBlond.

Jim studied the envelope. What could it mean? What trick were they playing on him now? She was, at Winnipeg and yet here was her handwriting on one of his own envelopes, without address or stamp.

He turned angrily on the woman who waited. "Who brought this? Why don't you tell me? What's the—?" The complaint smelt of the Ojibwa as she flung some dark stuff which circled her throat and was tucked into her woolen blouse, drove Jim to open the envelope.

She was bidding him good-by, telling him what he had already learned from the Winnipeg paper. Then he read: "Jim darling, I've come back! I was hurt—tried to close my heart to you. But it was no use, you already were there—had all of it! You just wouldn't be driven out. Oh, I've been so unhappy since leaving that note. They tried to drive me into a hateful thing, but my magic in the forests held me with his spells. Jim, I couldn't wait for spring—I've come back to you, dear maker of magic. Do you want me, now, after the pain I gave you? I reached Bonne Chance by dog-team, yesterday, and here I am at Sunset House waiting you, so you may know on your return I wanted those big arms of yours around me again—wanted to know you still loved me."

"I beg of you come to Bonne Chance when you get this, and tell me I haven't lost you—haven't brought my heart through the snows to you in vain. I love you—love you, Jim."

"AURORE."

Jim Stuart read and reread the letter until the words grew illegible to him.

Jim Stuart Read and Reread the Letter Until the Words Grew Illegible to His Blurred Eyes.

His blurred eyes. Like the thrust of a knife had come the shock of her first letter, and now, numb with the dull agony of despair, a joy more poignant than pain held him inarticulate.

He raised his hand to his hot forehead, as his dazed eyes turned to the woman who watched him.

"She come wild sed to see you," explained Sarah. "She cry w'en I tell her you travel nord wid de dog. I not let her een de house until she say she see your woman. Den she write dat lettal and tell me to say nothing until you read it."

Jim's heart was beating with delirious joy. She had sent MacLauren aside—laughed at the lure of the city, to come to him. Her heart was too wild to be caged down there in Winnipeg; she belonged to the forests, to the land of the "long snows."

His face darkened with disappointment as he looked at his watch. It was too late—too late to gallop his sled dogs across ten miles of frozen lake. The post would be asleep. Tomorrow morning he would go to the girl who had flouted the smooth MacLauren and demand his daughter of LeBlond—take her by force if it came to that; for she loved him, loved him. She had said she was his—his woman. In the face of LeBlond he'd take her. They'd be married by the missionary at Fort Hope. She'd never escape him again. For he was a made man, now. Sunset House would startle headquarters at Winnipeg with its trade. Now, he had more than a heart and empty hands to give her, Aurora! Aurora!

As the fatigued and half-mad Jim ate his supper, his eye was caught by the dark stuff circling the hovering Sarah's thick neck.

"What's that you've got around your neck?" he demanded. The copper-banded features of the Ojibwa lit with pride. "That es seeds Ojibwa like beewee Sarah."

"What? A stocking? On your neck?" Sarah straightened with dignity as she countered with disdain: "You think I wear cot on my foot—dat ver nice seed?"

His pent emotion found release in uncontrolled laughter, while Sarah stonily held her ground with color face. Then he appeared her with: "You'll be good to her now she's come back to Jim?"

The Ojibwa beamed until her black eyes were slits in her broad face. "Wen she go, she has Sarah. She geeve her wed bee kins on dis place." And Sarah pointed proudly to an expensive dusky check.

"That's like her—all heart and impulse. Sarah would die for her now," thought Stuart, as he rose and, taking his cap, went to the trade-house.

HOW

CHANGE OF CLIMATE CAN BE PROCURED IN THE HOME.—It will not be necessary to leave home if you want a "change of climate." That is, it will not be necessary after a while, for some elaborate experiments are being conducted at a Cincinnati hospital by Dr. C. A. Mills to determine the effect of atmospheric conditions to human health and comfort.

A laboratory has been fitted out where certain climate conditions can be reproduced and the effects upon animal life observed. Rabbits and rats are the subjects of the present experiments and humans will follow. Doctor Mills says that in the future controlled indoor atmospheres will be used in the treatment of disease. We shall have cold rooms for fever patients and hot, moist chambers for use when blood pressure gets too high. "It seems sure," he says, "that climatic change of any type a physician may require for his patient can soon be prescribed and carried out within the hospital or in the patient's home. A climatic cure no longer needs to mean that a patient is banished from his home or sent away from the care of his own physician."

How Broken Backs of

Books May Be Repaired

Books are withdrawn from a shelf by pulling on the top edge of the back binding. Heavy volumes soon become damaged by this handling, points out the May issue of Practical Mechanics Magazine. Not infrequently the whole back loosens. It is a simple matter to apply glue to the broken back, but difficult to find or improvise a clamp in which the book may be held tightly until the glue sets. "Apply the glue only to the sides of the broken back," the article direct, "and never down the center, or the book will break again when it is opened. Set the book carefully in place and then wrap the whole book tightly with a stout cord, its turns wound close together. Leave the cord on for at least 24 hours."

How Flowers Are Grouped

The beautiful blossom of the aster and the more simple bloom of the daisy, while they are widely different in appearance, belong to the same general family, a family which composes, perhaps, as much as one-seventh of all the vegetation in this country and constitute by far the largest single family group. These flowers, the Compositae, include the sunflower, the chrysanthemum, the goldenrod, the dandelion, the geranium, the ragwort, the sweet and other such common plants. A single bloom, or close examination, is found to be not one bloom, but many joined into a common head with the center flowers putting out the showier petals which give the illusion of a single flower.

How Zither Is Played

A zither is a musical instrument having from 30 to 40 strings over a shallow sounding box, set horizontally before the performer. A fretted finger board at one side lies under the ends of the strings, on which the melody is played by a plectrum on the right thumb, these strings being stopped by the left hand. The remaining strings are tuned in fourths and plucked by the fingers of the right hand.

How Anthracite Burns

Burning with great intensity, the radiant heat of anthracite is very great. At the time the coal is in a state of incandescence the heat of the flame generated is marked by its intensity. This coal neither softens nor swells in burning. It is burnt with a short flame of yellowish tinge that changes to a faint blue and is of transparent appearance, due to the particles of solid carbon in the flame.

How Glass Wool Is Made

Glass wool, also known as glass silk and spun glass, is used as an insulating material in ships, locomotives and engine rooms. The glass is prepared by being melted in a furnace and passed through holes from which it is spun in fine silky threads of about one-thousandth of an inch in diameter. The strands cling together, which gives it the appearance of a veil.

How We Get "Rule of Thumb"

Originally rule of thumb meant measuring with the thumb. In the cloth trade, as well as in carpentry, a thumb or thumb's breadth was taken in equal one inch. Its extension, "rule of thumb" is used figuratively for any simple and roughly practical method of measurement based on practice and experience rather than scientific knowledge.

How to Tell Wool Cloth

Wool themselves when boiled for 15 minutes in a solution containing one tablespoon of lye to a pint of water. Larger amounts of alkaline washing powder may be used instead of lye. This is an excellent way to detect fabrics made of both wool and cotton, as the cotton will not disappear under such treatment.

How Teakwood Is Cured

Since green teakwood would not float as a raft, and if let lie in the ground would season unevenly, it is cured standing. It is girdled and a broad strip of bark and sap wood taken off annually. Two or three years is required for curing to a point where it will float. It is handled by elephants.

Air in Libraries Should Be "Washed"

Air can wear out book bindings, government scientists have discovered, and this may force libraries in the future to have their air "washed."

An experiment that lasted eight years. Just completed by the Depart- ment of Agriculture, shows definitely that the acids from the air, as long suspected, are the cause of the true ble.

A set of dummy books, bound with various kinds of vegetable-tanned leather, were placed on a shelf outside a window of an office in Washington. The window was directly in the path of the prevailing winds and while half a mile of several government power plants and the main line of a steam railroad.

The books stayed there for more than eight years. Meanwhile samples of the same leathers were kept in a protected place. At the end of the eight years the physical condition and chemical composition of the exposed and protected leathers were compared.

The exposed leathers were pow- dery and easily scuffed, torn and cracked, while the protected leathers were sound, smooth and strong as in the beginning.

Why Electricity Is Not Yet Fully Understood

Electricity is known to be a form of energy, just as we have chemical light heat and other forms. According to one authority: "Innumerable attempts have been made to ascertain the true nature of electricity, but it cannot be said that as yet there is any true knowledge of what this subtle agent really is."

According to the electronic theory of hypothesis, the atom of matter is made up of smaller bodies called elec- trons electrical in their nature, and consequently all matter intimately is electrical, the atoms of the different elements of matter consisting of a cer- tain number of electrons, thus 700 in the hydrogen atom and 11,200 in the oxygen atom.

While this, of course is only a theory, it serves to explain a great deal of the properties and manifestations of elec- tricity, just as other theories of science help us to understand the nature of light, heat, etc.

Why Shrike "Impales"

The shrike, belying its name, is in reality a song bird, but a bird which has the unmusical nickname of the butcher bird. There are some 200 species of shrike, but only two of the family are to be found in the United States, these two being about ten inches in length.

Its unlovely name comes from a physical weakness which its ingenuity has overcome. It is not only an insect eater, but also preys upon mice and small birds. Its feet are its weakness, and it is unable to hold its prey in its talons. Handicapped, the shrike seizes its food in its beak and then im- pales the hapless victim on a thorn, which serves as its talons.

Why Moisture Hurts Paint

One of the worst conditions for painting is the presence of moisture. It is important, in painting the new house, to see that all surfaces are thoroughly dry before attempting to paint them. If paint is applied over a surface containing any appreciable amount of moisture, especially if the moisture be internal, that is, contained in the material painted, just as soon as the interior of the house becomes warmed the water vapor will attempt to escape through the paint film and eventually will cause either blistering or peeling of the film.

Why Blood Clots in Eggs

Blood clots in eggs are the result of overstrained egg organs causing the membranes of ovary and oviduct to become inflamed and the swollen blood vessels let go, so that escaping blood forms a clot which later is included in an egg. Clots in or attached to the yolk come from the ovary, while those that are found in the white come from some section of the oviduct.

Why "Red-Letter Day"

Formerly red-letter days were those so indicated in the calendar of days in the Book of Common Prayer, and some prayer books are still printed in this style. In general usage the term has come to mean especially fortunate or auspicious days in a person's life. o. days to be remembered because of some important event or benefit.

Why Known as "Pop"

Certain soft drinks received the name "pop" because when the bottles were opened the corks were expelled with a pop or quick explosive noise. The original name was soda pop which was soon shortened to pop.

Why Britain Is "Red"

The British empire is usually shown in red or pink because of the custom of so coloring British territory, which began with British mapmakers, who merely desired to make the British empire prominent on their maps.

Why Shower of Rice

The custom of showering rice on newly married couples comes from In- dia, rice being with the Hindus an em- blem of fecundity.

Why Hair Turns Gray

Loss of pigment causes hair to turn gray. Extremely severe shocks have been known to cause a loss of pigment in the hair.

IMMORTALITY CONDITIONAL

That man is immortal is a pernicious doctrine that has its origin in tradition rather than in the Scrip- tures. Eternal life is conditional, "Who only hath immortality" refers to Je- sus Christ, "This mortal must put on immortality" refers to the man who obtains eternal life through Jesus Christ. "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ, our Lord." In this passage, if the word "life" is taken literally, the word "death" must also be so taken. In other words, eter- nal reward is eternal life, and eternal punishment is death from which there is no awakening. The theologian who teaches that man lives forever in a conscious state of suffering if he is not a Christian, slanders God. Reason alone assures us that the Creator will not cause to suffer eternally the creature who is born into this world without his own consent, and who, after a moment of time, hardly time to get thoroughly acquainted with his surroundings, is removed against his own will. Reason alone, but not alone reason assures us. "Fear not Him who is able to destroy the body, but Him that is able to destroy both soul and body," teaches beyond controver- sy, the destructibility of the soul.

JUNE PRIMARIES

Friend Republicans:—

To those whom I have not been able to personally see, owing to such an extended May Term of Court still in progress at Rumford, I wish to take this opportunity to present to you in behalf of my candidacy for the office of County Attorney, the following:

I am now serving the first term as your County Ator- ney; it has always been customary in the past to give each County Attorney two terms of office representing his section of the County. Secondly, having served one term, with the experience thus acquired, I should be better able to perform the duties of County Attorney and strictly enforce our criminal laws during this period when depression encour- ages crime, better than one who would be new to the office and the duties required. Your vote at the Primaries will be appreciated, thereby giving the central part of the County the representation to which it is entitled and thereby allow- ing me to fill the customary second term as County Ator- ney; thanking you for your support, I remain
